

Bringing runaways back home safely

Every dog in England will have to be microchipped from 2016 and if you wish to travel abroad with your pet, a microchip is a vital part of the "Pet Passport Scheme".

Many of our implanters will travel to you, so not only should you save money on the procedure and travel time, your pet will feel even less stressed being microchipped in the familiar surroundings of home.

Every year more than 300,000 animals go astray in the UK alone. Most of them cannot be identified. The lucky ones end up in an animal home.

All PeddyMark microchips have a unique number and are registered on the Petlog database, meaning owner's details can be easily looked up. Animal and owner can then be quickly reunited, with the minimum amount of stress for all involved.

Microchipping is the most effective way of identifying a lost pet, chips don't come off like collars can. Keep your loved ones safe.

PeddyMark supplies both standard and mini microchips to suit all pets and owner's requirements, as well as other quality products at affordable prices.
